Tickets remain In Hootenanny Cafeteria draw

Seventy-five extra tickets to tonight's Hootenanny have been made available, and will be given out, twenty-five each hour, at the Union Cafeteria starting 11 am.

The good music tonight will be supplied by internationally known folk singer Josh White, the Ivy League Trio, an American night club group, the Raftsmen, a local group, who have recorded three L.P.'s, and Shirley Singer, also from this area.

Nancy Ames, a girl from the U.S. West Coast who stole the show at an ABC Hootenanny last week, will also be featured. Well known Canadian-born performer Oscar Brand will be the Master of ceremonies for the two and a half hour show.

Ticket holders must come to Redpath Hall before 7 pm if they wish to make use of their hard-earned tickets.

Cardinal's good offices sought:

Cafeteria dispute continues

Students at the University of Montreal met with Cardinal Léger in an attempt to arrange a truce with the University administration.

The students have instituted a boycott of the Social Centre cafeteria in protest against a ten-cent increase in the price of a meal.

Pierre Marois, president of AGEUM — the students' union — said the boycott will remain in effect, since the University has not presented them an "equitable" solution. Following the meeting with the Cardinal, Marois was reported to have said that His Excellency would attempt to obtain a truce which might avert the possibility of a general strike.

Principle Involved

At a news conference Tuesday, Marois' demands were unanimously approved by more than a hundred students present. The AGEUM president explained its stand as one of principle: Any increase in student fees or meal prices is a step backwards from the goal of free education and the democratization of learning.

Marois attributed the disagreement between students and administration to differing conceptions of the function of the University. The students consider it a community of professors and scholars, while the Conseil des gouverneurs sees its relationship to the students as basically paternalistic.

Part of the reason for the students' resentment was that the increase was imposed without consultation of the Committee on Administration of the Social Centre, a body which has student representation.

Rector's Defence

Monsignor Irénée Lussier, Rector of the University, held his own press conference in defence of the administration's position. Although he insisted the authorities would not be dictated to by the student body, he declined to impose sanctions against the students responsible for the boycott.

It had earlier been suggested that such students ran the risk of expulsion. The AGEUM, however, threatens to call an immediate walkout should any of its members be expelled.

Explaining the economic reasons for the increase in cafeteria prices, Msgr. Lussier said that last year's cafeteria budget showed a deficit of $43,000. The Provincial Government could not be expected to make up the loss, because it is generally expected that such auxiliary services be self-sufficient. Rather than decrease quality or quantity of food served, he said, the University instituted the price increase.

Although Msgr. Lussier did not close the door to further negotiation, he said that the University did not have any obligation to supply meals at any prices — only education.

YCL constitution Passed by Council

The constitution of the Young Communist League of McGill University was passed with only one dissenting vote by the year's first meeting of the Students' Executive Council last night.

The constitution stresses as its end the achievement of Socialism and then Communism, at McGill. The League intends to work in full co-operation with other "working class movement groups" and intends to use Communism to further world peace.

Membership will be open to all students who agree to abide by its Constitution, which follows the regular pattern of all campus clubs.

David Dent, B.A. 3, the League's president, told the Daily that "I think it is a great step forward for democracy at McGill that our constitution has been accepted by an almost unanimous vote".

Dent was born in London, England, and came to Canada three years ago when he worked as a laborer for a year before entering McGill. It was during this period that he became a Communist.

The Quebec government's controversial Bill 60 has been postponed to the regular session of the legislature, which is to be called for January 15. It had been scheduled to be discussed at a special session of the legislature in late October.

Bill 60, the Department of Education and Youth Act, would create a Ministry of Education and Youth whose Minister would be responsible "for promoting education — and for ensuring the progress of educational institutions".

The Bill has been postponed because members of the province's Assembly of Bishops are leaving for Rome for an ecumenical conference that will keep them there almost until Christmas. The bishops, along with many other groups have not favoured the bill. Since this large group will be out of the country Premier Lesage has postponed the bill until after their return so no charges of ramming a bill can be laid by opposition parties.

Paul Gérin-Lajoie, Minister of Youth, has been campaigning extensively for the passage of Bill 60. He has recently made trips to the Gaspé and other areas giving talks on the merits of the bill. He has stated repeatedly that this bill should be passed as soon as possible and expressed regret at the delay.

The bill, which has been introduced because of an increase in the number of students, changes in living conditions, and an accelerating shift in intellectual attitudes, may have caused a cabinet crisis. Lajoie has staked his career on the bill and has threatened to resign if it is not passed.

Informed circles in Quebec feel that the government and the Quebec Assembly of Bishops will come to an agreement on the form of the Assembly's amendments, which, as they now exist, are the major stumbling-block to the passage of Bill 60.

There are actually only three amendments which are completely unacceptable to the government.

The bishops have proposed that the two deputy ministers for education be chosen from the Protestant and Catholic School Boards.

The Lesage government does not wish to write this into the Bill, as it would destroy the Parent Report's attempt to lessen the gap between the two separate boards.

There is also disagreement on the delineation of the two deputy ministers' authority. The Assembly of Bishops has demanded that the school boards be allowed to set qualifications for students' religious and moral instruction.

New appointment - Dr. Eric Jay named Dean of Divinity

Reverend Professor Eric George Jay has been appointed the new Dean of the Faculty of Divinity.

Dr. Jay is presently a professor of theology in the faculty and also principal of the Montreal Diocesan College to which posts he was appointed in 1958.

He succeeds Dr. Stanley B. Frost who was recently appointed dean of the faculty of graduate studies and research.

Dr. Jay was educated at Leeds University and the College of the Resurrection, Mirfield and proceeded to London University where he holds the degrees of Bachelor of Divinity, Master of Theology and Doctor of Philosophy.

He is also Canon of Christ Church Cathedral and has very quickly established a wide reputation both in the ecumenical movement and in the academic life of the university.

Dr. Jay was born in Colchester, England in 1907 and married Margaret Webb, daughter of the Vicar of Ashton Hayes and has three children — one of whom graduated last year from McGill, while another is entering Oxford University this session.

Persuasion By Intimidation

The National Federation of Canadian University Students which represents more than 100,000 of Canada's youth stands today faced with probably the most serious threat in her history. At its national Congress, to be held in Edmonton next week, representatives of Université de Montréal will propose the splitting of NFCUS into french and english-speaking unions with a central co-ordination body at the top, the latter to be composed of equal numbers of french and english-speaking students.

At first glance this proposal may seem reasonable and universities from outside Quebec, such as UBC, have responded favorably to it. Closer scrutiny however forces this newspaper to oppose the idea with all its strength.

The plan purports to grant equality to the french Canadian students. IF it did we would support it. It does not. This plan if adopted can only give them superiority, which no minority group deserves. It would mean, in effect, that the vote of the French universities, which represent perhaps 15% of the total student population of Canada, would be equal to the vote of the other 85%. It would mean that we are sanctioning, for NFCUS the same type of injustice that we decry when we see the imbalance of voters per constituency in our legislatures.

We at McGill should be extremely conscious of the problems facing French Canada and sympathetic to her struggle for real equality, across this nation. The rest of Canada has not given the French population the co-operation and understanding which is their legal and moral due. We must, as the major English-speaking university in Quebec, strive to promote a viable reconciliation between Canada's 'Two Nations'.

Nevertheless, reconciliation will not be reached by secessionist threats. "Do things our way or we will pull out", is not the attitude which one who honestly seeks a modus vivendi uses, for it denies to any discussion the possibility of fruitful negotiations, of give and take. The students of McGill and the rest of Canada have a duty to enter the discussions in good faith and make every effort to reach an amicable solution. However, this duty does not and must not be interpreted as an obligation to surrender our integrity or our rights.

If the student leaders of University of Montreal come to Edmonton intent on bludgeoning NFCUS into submission and unwilling to compromise, then the only course open is to allow them to leave. This might well mean the end of our dream of a unified Canadian student body. It might mean the end of NFCUS and every student in this country would suffer from its demise. However, inequality of the type proposed cannot be sanctioned. If sanctioned, the death of NFCUS is virtually assured.

Now, we can only await the results of the national Congress and work for a rapprochement. Meanwhile, we hope that the leaders of University of Montreal will consider carefully the consequences of their proposal. The solution to Canada's problems does not lie in obstinacy and threats.

In The Market Place

by CHARLES SPECTOR

For most us, the tragedy about taking a Liberal Arts course in our teens, is the unconscious gap between book knowledge and unsheltered experience. Experience may seem to be alongside book knowledge, but that is an illusion; the latter has carried us, blindfolded, around the track before. At an age when we cannot vote and are financially dependant on our parents, we learn philosophy, sociology, the intricacies of government and commercial law. At an age when we are having our first groping intimacies with high school girls, we condition rats and read D. H. Lawrence.

Anyway, after a few years of term papers, Freud, and exam time martyrdoms, I was convinced (especially after reading "Faust") that I was intellectually saturated.

I tried to turn to the sensual. I was grateful for the after-rains when the campus smelled like a green popsicle; and for those Indian summer afternoons I spent with Cora on the green tops of the Beaver Lake bowl, looking through her stray black hairs, telling her the world was a concentration camp, and cherishing every second of my perfumed captivity...

But, most of the year, the city is cold with snow and the slush of summer jobs, and Coras come and go, like cycles of wine and heartburn. In those three hundred days or so each year, when the senses reach out into the void of words, I became double-jointed under a clean sky, blending sight and smell with damp earth etc., etc., etc...

And so, when I had an opportunity to go to Israel for a few months, I arranged to spend most of my time on a cooperative farm settlement known as a kibbutz.

Shattered Illusion

After a few days of oven heat, dung, rats, hard work and bad food, my romantic illusion was shattered. In fact I left the kibbutz earlier than I had originally planned and retreated to the womb of the familiar city (of Haifa) where I delighted in swearing at a bus driver and almost getting hit by a car. I relaxed in an outdoor cafe, a table dotted elevated sidewalk overlooking the tree-lined shopping area of Hadar Hacarmel, and in the best American tradition of cholesterol suicide, I ordered two milk shakes...

Yet, I recommend a "hiccup" of farm life to students, especially students of philology. Otherwise they will never really understand the meaning of such words as "coward", "chicken", "riot", "herd", and perhaps even "university student".

I will never forget my few days in the pasture on a carpet of cow dung.

Dozens of pregnant cows, sired by a humped Brahmin bull with volleyball testicles, are herded by stones and shouts into an enclosure and hose sprayed with disinfectant.

In another enclosure, a bull calf is prodded into a dead-end tunnel. Suddenly a door slams behind him, caging him. The object is to force him to put his head through a hole at the front of the cage so that he can be muzzled, tied to a tractor and dragged to "Auschwitz" (sic) — a bovine paradise of shade and deep green grass where bull calves are fattened for slaughter.

Top of the Cage

Someone climbs to the top of the cage and pounds the back of the calf with his boot. The beast turns his face from the direction of the blows, he "cowers" like a school child trying to avoid the reality of the principal's strap; his blood-shot eyes swarming with flies reflect his inarticulate helplessness. Finally, he springs forward and the hole contracts tightly around his neck. He struggles violently for a minute, collapses to the ground, goes limp, and foams at the mouth. He is muzzled; the cage is opened and the calf, so docile in a herd, pulls and tears, "bulldozes" and bellows, but is dragged along by the inexorable tractor.

One afternoon, I was assigned to the chicken coop; hundreds of young chickens were graduating from a mass nursery of white storm waves to the dubious luxury of semi-private cages.

Shoshanna with her burlap bag, stamped some of them into a corner and after adjusting her portable fence, picked them up three at a time and handed them to me. I had never touched a live chicken before.

"Don't be afraid", she smiled.

I struggled to grasp the wrinkled butter feet. I went into the next room, opened a cage and dropped them in. There was frantic wind motion, I felt a sting and a red pinpoint appeared on my finger. I waited till it formed a dime circle.

"I'm bleeding", I reported to Shoshanna. She laughed.

"You call that bleeding!"

She unbuttoned her blouse and turned her back toward me; there was a purple streak across it.

"A souvenir of the War of Independence", she said.

I wiped my finger on my pants and she handed me another bunch of chicken feet.

"These poor chickens", I said to her, "Imagine being stuffed in a cage all your life!"

"Just like university students", she said.

Half Dozen Chickens

She later segregated a half dozen chickens whom she described as sickly. She picked them up, phlegmatically twisted their necks and tossed them away like cigarette butts. A headless corpse fluttered at my feet; I stepped back and almost tripped over a twisting mass of soft feathers. I excused myself and ran outside to a water tap...

I felt sorry for the celibate bull calves, I felt sorry for the pregnant cows who would be slaughtered at their menopause when they are no longer useful, I felt sorry for the decapitated chickens, and I felt sorry for myself standing in cow dung...

I never dream about working on a farm anymore. The gap between book knowledge and experience is a little narrower.

Red Feather campaign Needs more freshmen

Freshmen and freshettes are invited to come to the lower campus on Monday, September 30 at 5 pm to canvass for the fourth annual Red Feather Campaign.

The Red Feather Committee expects to recruit 1200 canvassers to raise their objective of $10,000. Students from Sir George Williams University, the fraternities, and the sororities are also invited to help canvass the 84,000 doors.

C. F. Carsley, Chairman of Red Feather's Campaign this year, will open the student Blitz.

Students will canvass the area in pairs, sent on their way by speeches from Dr. H. Locke Robertson and the Red Feather Organization. The pair collecting the most money will be awarded a prize at the post game celebrations to be held at the Royal Canadian Hussars Armory, where Dean Morgan and his band will give you music to dance to.

M.T.C. buses and Jaguar sports cars have been donated to the Red Feather Committee to provide transportation to canvass points and rides home after the fun.

Bob Roberts, a McGill graduate, is in charge of the Blitz.

Language lab Time posted This afternoon

Language laboratory hours for freshmen will be posted today in Peterson Hall after 2 pm.

The purpose of the laboratory courses is to further the student's conversational abilities.

Each student in the language laboratory is seated in a booth equipped with earphones, microphone and tape recorder. Professor Marceau instructs students through the earphones.

The students in turn repeat various phrases and sentences into the microphones. Their voices are recorded and can later be played for correction.

All freshmen studying a foreign language are required to attend a weekly laboratory period. Students are reminded to complete an attendance card and to punch the clock before class.

Laval holds Congress On Canadian Affairs

Students of Laval University have recently started work on their third Congress on Canadian Affairs to be held in Quebec City from November 5 to November 9.

This year, the Congress will deal with "Les Nouveaux Québécois", a theme of great interest to the students. It plans to discuss the "quiet revolution" in Quebec as it has been in the recent years. The Congress will attempt to explain this situation to the students.

During the previous sessions of the Congress, it enjoyed active participation from such prominent persons as the Honourable Jean Lesage, Davie Fulton, George Hees, and T.C. Douglas as well as Réal Caouette, André Laurendeau, and many others.

Official Patrons

Official patrons of the third Congress will be the Governor-General, the Honourable Georges P. Vanier, the Prime Minister, and the Lieutenant-Governors and Premiers of the ten provinces who performed this service for the other two sessions.

The first Congress dealt with "Confederation: A Success or a Failure" and the second considered the question "The Canadian Economy: Where are we going?" The students feel that the results of these two Congresses were very successful. However, they hold even greater expectations of this year's Congress.

The Congress is made possible by a grant received from the Minister of Cultural Affairs, grants from Laval University itself, grants from the L'Association Générale des Etudiants de l'Université Laval de Québec, and through the generous donations of certain private companies.

The organizers hope to make this Congress a profitable experience for the students of Canada and the country itself.

Bandsmen seeking recruits

The McGill Redmen Band is again searching for new blood with which to strengthen its ranks. A cordial invitation is extended to all musically inclined students to join this worthwhile activity.

Membership in the Redmen Band involves attending only two practices a week in the Gym, held Monday and Thursday evenings from 6:45 to 8:30 pm until the completion of the football season.

The Redmen Band, which is under the very capable leadership of president Ivan Karp, is looking forward to a banner year. In recognition of his outstanding ability, Karp was selected to attend the Conference of Marching Bands, held this past summer at Northwestern University, and he plans to initiate a variety of new ideas concerning drill and technique this year. An entirely new system of marching, which is reputed to be the simplest and quickest to learn, will be employed.

Fringe Benefits

There are many benefits associated with belonging to this fine organization. The Band accompanies the football Redmen to the University of Toronto and to Kingston and all expenses are paid. The liberal expense account allowed makes football trips quite inexpensive for band members.

Free passes are also issued for all events connected with the football season, both at home and away. These include tickets to the victory dances held Saturday nights and the post game celebrations in the afternoons.

Freshmen joining the Band are reminded that their membership is worth ten points toward satisfying the requirements of the Freshmen Physical Education Program.

Membership in this fine organization provides a harmless means of letting off hot air as well as helping to engender that much needed spirit at McGill. Many openings exist and some instruments are available. McGill deserves a fine band to support its fine football team. Why not make a date for tonight at 6:45 at the Gym?

Redmen romp To soccer win

by TOM CARROW

The McGill Redmen Soccer team opened its season last night by soundly trouncing the University of Montreal's Carabins 6-1. The Red and White squad completely dominated the play throughout the game.

The game opened slowly for McGill with the Redmen in control of the play. Around the ten minute mark, McGill began to press the attack which finally resulted in a goal at the fifteen minute mark by Peter Nwafor on a cross from Sebastian Sizgoric.

McGill continued to apply pressure but missed on several good chances and were repeatedly foiled by the spectacular antics of Ducharme in goal. Nwafor put his second score by Ducharme at 28 minutes and Hardy closed out the scoring in the half with a well placed shot at the thirty minute mark.

Just before the end of the half Marin placed a hard drive on net which was ably deflected onto the crossbar by Ducharme, but Hardy was right there to head it in. Unluckily the referee saw fit to call Hardy offside at this untimely moment, thus nullifying the effort.

The second half progressed in much the same manner as the first half with Hardy counting at eight minutes and Nwafor at twelve minutes for McGill.

In the last 15 minutes, the Redmen returned their starting lineup to the game and the attack again began to move. Les Clarke barely missed on a lone shot at thirty-one minutes and John Hardy gained his hat-trick at 33 minutes on a great pass from Marin.

With little more than a minute to go in the game, Blanch spoiled Lynch's bid for a shutout by making good on a penalty kick. This closed out the scoring for the game.

Thus McGill showed that it is of the same championship calibre as the unbeaten teams of the last two years. Play starts in the Ottawa St. Lawrence Conference with a home match against Carleton at 2 pm Saturday.
